Lord Sandy's (pronounced with a silent Y as in politics) returned from a tour of duty in India to Worcester in about 1835. His pallette soon missed the piquant Bengal sauce he had become accustomed to. The recipe was given the chemists to make up. The partnership of John Wheely Lea and William Perrins of 63 Broad Street were chosen by virtue of their pre-eminance in Worcestershire. After several tasty but passe concoctions, Lord Sandy's pronounced favourably. The marketing potential of the potent brew became apparent as friends started asking for samples, so Mssr Lee & Perrins obtained permission to produce commercially and use the slogan "from nobleman of Worcestershire". Subsequently they made and bigger batches in bigger and bigger premises.
